THE OLD PURITAN TIMES. The old reverence for the sabbath is still retained in the moral districts of Massachumind one of the former Puritan habits, as described in the following article:

The Puritan Sabbath in the villages of New England commenced on Saturday afternoon. No labor was performed on the evening which preceded the Lord's day .-Early on Sunday morning the blowing of a horn in some places announced that the hour of worship was at hand. In other places a flag was hung out of the rude building occupied as a church. At Cambridge a drum was beat in military style-at Salem a bell indicated the opulence of that settle-

The public religious services usually commanced at nine o'clock in the morning, and occupied from six to eight hours, divided by an intermission of one hour for dinner. The people collected quite punctually, as the law compelled their attendance; and there was a neavy fine for any one that rode too fast to meeting. The sexton called upon the minister and escorted him to church in the same tashion that the sheriff now conducts the judge into our state courts. There were no pews in the church, and the congregation had places assigned them upon the rude benches at the annual town meeting, according to their age, importance, and social standing. A person was fined if he occupied the seat of another. Our local histories reveal that pride, envy and jealousy were active passions among the men of olden times, and it was delicate and difficult business to "seat the meeting-house," as it was quaintly

Many of the early churches of New England had two clergymen-one, who was ealled the pastor, the other, the teacher. The Sabbath services were as follows: The congregation assembled at an early hour-never later than 9 o'clock. After prayer, a chapter from the Bible was read by one of the ministers, and "expounded" at length. In many of the churches, however, the Bible was not read at all, and it took years of agitation to carry that "innovation." A osalm in metre was next sung, which was dietated, line by line, to the congregation : this service was usually performed by one part in the introductory services. The bapzisms, church discipline, and collections, always took place in the afternoon. The "long" prayer esually occupied from an bour to an hour and a half, and many of the sermons of this period make from a hundred to a hundred and fifty pages.

There was a contribution every Sunday, preceded by an appeal from one of the deacons. The boxes were not carried round, but the congregation aross and proceeded to the deacon's seat, and deposited their offerings. The magistrates and "brief gentlemen" walked up first, the elders next, and thea followed the "common people;" this ceremony occupied much time. Besides the money given, persons brought various useful articles and goods as offerings. The collect with any manufactured, either in or out of the tions were distributed by the deacons to the | State of Virginia.

ranisters and the poor. The trials of celesiastical offenders at the close of the services aften afforded much excitement as well as amusement; for some offences a particular dress was worn, and the "confessions" of the offender were heard with much interest. Oftentimes the public services were continued until after sunset. After the benediction, the ministers passed out of the church, bowing to the peothe on both sides of the aisle, as they all sat in silence until the clergymen and their famil'es had gone out! THE FOURTH OF JULY IN PARIS. The Americans in Paris, indulged their perriotic feelings in a fourth of July celebration on Wednesday. The affair was gotten ap by subscription. Mr. Faulkner, the American minister, and Mr. Spencer, our Consul having taken the most active part in it. All "respectable Americans," (so the subscriptemporarily sojourning in Paris, were to be invited, and as I happen to belong to that favored class, I received in due time my card of invitation, bearing the seal of American legation. It was very "Frenchy" in appearany ordinary pocket. The eards of invitation, which are strictly personal, must be surrendered at the gate of the park-morning costume. Over a thousand of these inritations were issued, and about six hundred THE LATEST AND GREATEST INVENTION persons, principally Americans, attended the tete, which was certainly well arranged .--Inside the beautiful grounds, which were formerly used as a horticultural garden, belonging to the government, on a spacious lawn in front of an old chateau, a canvass parilion had been erected, the exterior decorated with French and American flags, and in front of which a liberty pole, surmounted by a large gilt eagle, from which the flag of our country fioated, had been raised. The interior of the pavilion was lined with shields, bearing the names of the different states of the TYPES! I'nion, a little Frenchified in the orthogra-orchestra, and on one side a long table, bountifully spread with eatables and drinkabias. At the entrance stood a highly reusecrable-looking individual, a perfect "model of deportment," dressed in black, with knee-breeches and silk stockings, who announced the names of ladies and gentlemen as they entered, his French organs of speech snaking sad havoe with our hard English names. At three o'clock, when a goodly number had arrived, the band struck up "Hail Columbia," and then the dancing commenced. There was a fine collection of oer fair country women, and well we might be proud of them. It was really retreshing to be allowed to look upon such a number of their beautiful faces, affording such a favorable contrast to the angular and not handsome taces of the Parisian women. The dancing was relieved by visits to the lunch tables. and at the champaign began soflow freely.

Lbout seven o'clock Mr. Vaulkner called the assembly to order, and after a few appropriets and eloquent remrks, he read the Beckeration of Independence, which was lissened to with the most profound attention. and when it 4.28 finished, three hearty cheers were given for it, and for our glorious coun-
